Fairfield's Development and Economic Leader Changing Hats

Tim Bachman headed to regional role with REDI Cincinnati

Fairfield, OH – Tim Bachman, longtime Director of Development Services with the City of Fairfield, announced today that he will be retiring effective Sept. 8. He has been with Fairfield for 31 years. Tim will continue to use his vast knowledge and experience on a regional level when he becomes Senior Manager, Business Development and Project Management, for REDI Cincinnati on Sept. 12.

"Tim has led our economic development with the highest level of expertise and integrity. His dedication to the planning and growth of Fairfield's corporate and residential development has been a paramount part of the City's success," said Mark Wendling, Fairfield City Manager. "He will be sorely missed."

After graduating from the University of Cincinnati in 1985, Tim began with Fairfield as a Planner. Two years later he was promoted to his current position as Director.

"I have witnessed and been fortunate to be part of many great things as Fairfield has matured," Tim said. "I am especially proud of the support we have given to the business community and citizens by ensuring an economic environment where they can prosper and profit. I look forward to my new endeavor with REDI Cincinnati as we communicate the great business attributes the Greater Cincinnati region has to offer."

The development of Village Green and the Fairfield Town Center are two sources of pride for Tim, as well as the corporate community that has located and expanded in the City during his tenure.

In 2005, Tim was honored with the Greater Cincinnati Public Service award. He has also earned certifications from the American Institute of Certified Planners and the National Development Council. Professional organizations that he is part of include the American Planning Association, Ohio Planning Conference, Urban Land Institute and the International Economic Development Council.

"REDI Cincinnati is thrilled to have Tim join our organization," said Johnna Reeder, President. "His extensive experience in project management, process improvement and local government affairs will add significant value to our regional economic development efforts. Tim is a welcomed addition to our leadership team."
